Background

The Review of Middle East Studies is MESA's journal of review, appearing biannually with essays and approximately 100 reviews of books, audiovisuals, music, and software per issue. The focus of the Review is the state of the craft in all fields of Middle East studies, covering in particular new and evolving topics and problems in research, reports from the field, new methods and technologies in research and teaching about the Middle East, and ethical issues in scholarship.
